HEI Admissions – Progression into Higher Education Level 3 City & Guilds Technical Qualifications in Land

This guide has been produced for Higher Education Institutes to provide information on the new Level 3 City & Guilds Technical Qualifications in Land.

These new industry recognised qualifications were co-created and supported by employers to bridge the gap between education and employment. City & Guilds worked with a number of key Trade and Professional Associations to ensure that the qualifications were fit for purpose. These included the National Farmers Union, the Horticultural Trades Association, the British Horse Society, the Pet Industry Federation, the British and Irish Association of Zoos and Aquariums, the Institution of Agricultural Engineers, the Arboricultural Association and the British Florist Association to name but a few.

These qualifications are aligned to the latest design principles specified by the DfE for high quality technical pathways that prepare young people for the world of work.

They have parity of esteem with GCE qualifications, and provide a credible route both directly to employment and to higher education, with UCAS points attached.

Learners who have taken a City & Guilds Technical Qualification are highly focused on employment, and already on the path to their career. For them, university is the next step that will allow them to expand their technical and professional skills in their chosen field.

About City & Guilds

City & Guilds is the recognised brand for skills-based learning and professional development. We work with employers and professional bodies worldwide to set and assess occupational standards. Our Technical Qualifications have been built to support progression from education to meaningful employment.

We hope the information provided supports your admissions process.
