Provide eyelash perming

Eyelash perming is a relatively new treatment on offer in the salon and is a popular addition to the suite of eye treatments. You will learn how to carry out a sensitivity test, consult with your client and assess their natural lashes. By carrying out an eyelash perm you will make the lashes appear longer and will dramatically open up the eye area. This unit covers the knowledge of the chemical process of eyelash perming. You will also learn how to recognise contra-indications and how to follow safe working methods.

What does it mean?

Some useful words are explained below

Conjunctivitis

A bacterial infection where the eyes are red, swollen and sticky.

Contra-action

An unfavourable reaction that may occur either during or after the treatment, eg skin swelling, excessive erythema.

Erythema

Redness of the skin caused by the blood vessels bringing blood to the surface.

Fixing lotion

A chemical, usually sodium bromate, that when applied to the lashes will fix them into their new shape, making the curl permanent.

Perm lotion

A chemical, usually thioglycolate, that when applied to the lashes will soften and break down the disulphide bonds, allowing the hair to bend into a new shape.

Perm rods

Cylindrical foam rods that come in various sizes and are used to curl the eyelashes.

Sensitivity test

A test carried out 24 hours before the treatment to see if the client is allergic to the perming products.

Sterilisation

The process of destroying all micro-organisms and their spores.

Stye

A small boil at the base of the eyelash follicle which is red, sore and swollen.

Revision tip

Never use hairdressing perming solutions for eyelash perming; the products are a lot stronger and irritation and breakage will occur.

Every client has different skin and you don't know what allergies they may have. Make sure that you provide each client with a skin test at least 24 hours before the treatment.

Do not tint eyelashes just before eyelash perming; the perming chemicals will lift out the colour.

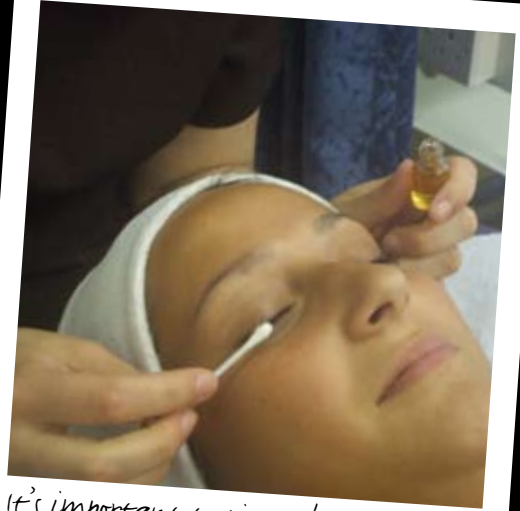

Eyelash

Always follow the manufacturer's instructions when using perming products.

Always remember to remove your client's contact lenses and eye make-up before you start an eyelash perm.

It's important to time the perming process accurately to get the best results.

perming

If you carry out an eyelash tint after an eyelash perm be aware that the eye area is more sensitive; it is often advisable to wait for 24 hours.
