

Unit 303: Contribute to business success

Activity 29: Planning considerations

Outline the considerations a chef de partie would need to take into account when planning for members of the team to attend the following types of training sessions:

- Induction training with the human resource team
- Attending a college course one day a week for a year
- Completing an online course and assessment
- Completing on-job training with an experienced member of the team
- Attending a one day master class to develop skills
- Completing a half day updating on company standards
- Training on new menu items to meet company standards.