These qualifications can also equip the staff who are delivering Functional Skills in the classroom or workplace.

	Key features	Key benefits
Structure	For English for Literacy and Language teaching the learner must complete the 4 mandatory units. For Mathematics for numeracy teaching the learner has to achieve 2 of the 3 optional units.	The units within English for Literacy and Language Teaching include all of the key elements of analysing English Language, Reading, Speaking and Listening and writing skills. The units within Mathematics for Numeracy Teaching allow the learner to select two contexts from using mathematics in academic subjects, professional and vocational
Assessment	Candidates must have a completed portfolio of evidence that includes all of the learning outcomes.	City & Guilds have produced some assessments to use with these qualifications. These are internally marked by centres. The assessments are optional, a centre can choose to use them or devise their own assessment materials or facilitate the development of a portfolio of evidence, as long as they meet the outcome requirements. The assessment methodology can then be tailored to meet the individual needs and learning style of the candidate.
