6. Officially recognised ways of acquiring the certificate

This qualification can only be offered by an institution/provider that has been approved by City & Guilds and therefore meets its quality requirements for staff and centre resources and is subject to regular checks.

The following assessment methods are used:

- Final assessments:
 - written test set by City & Guilds and marked by the centre
 - practical assessments set by City & Guilds and marked by the centre.

All assessments are quality assured by City & Guilds verifiers.

The vocational education and training is a combination of classroom based and/or work based and/or realistic working environment based activities.

The recommended Guided Learning Hours (GLHs) for this qualification are 90 hours.

Entry requirements

City & Guilds exercises a policy of open access and does not set formal entry requirements for its qualifications. Centres are however required to ensure that learners are registered for a programme of study and examination at the appropriate level.
