Recorded webinar - 20% off the job in Apprenticeship standards

Confused about off-the-job training? Let our funding and digital learning experts help.

We know that many training providers and employers want more support over how to evidence this vital element of the on-programme phase of the apprenticeship. That's why Bryony Kingsland (UK Funding Manager) and Kirsten Train-Ward (Digital Product Manager) have run a webinar to help training providers and employers get to grips with off-the-job training.

This recording covers:

- What off-the-job training consists of
- how you can track and demonstrate your apprentice's progress to independent auditors.

T level occupational maps consultation out now (England)

In November 2017 the Institute for Apprenticeships (IfA) took ownership of occupational maps from the Department for Education, a resource which will help determine how occupations are categorised and in turn T levels are developed and implemented.

These occupational maps contain all current apprenticeship standards under development/ready for delivery and suggestions on what other occupations are still missing and should be developed.

The IfA are seeking views on the occupational maps to ensure they capture all the relevant occupations in each route and that these are grouped coherently.

In addition, they would like to understand for which ones T Levels or college based training programmes (similar to study programmes) should be developed.

You can find all occupations for automotive manufacturing and retail motor industry under the 'Engineering and Manufacturing' route panel.

Vehicle parts, vehicle sales and auto customer service are still in the consultation in pages 32-33 of the following document: <https://lnkd.in/e6kt-kN> under the 'Sales, Marketing and Procurement' route panel. These occupations are at risk of being withdrawn from development and the generic retail standards to be implemented in the automotive industry.

Occupations in red are those proposed for development.

The ones in amber are those which already have a standard approved.

The ones in green are ready for delivery so they already have a standard, an assessment plan and a funding band allocated.

The black ones are suggestions of new occupations not proposed for development yet.

This is a last chance to have your say <https://lnkd.in/dRmXA4U>

Consultation on occupational maps for T Levels closes on 08 February 2018.

T level programmes consultation out now

The Government has just launched the new T level programmes consultation running for 10 weeks until 08 February 2018.

The consultation sets out proposals for T levels and seeks views on how to implement them to ensure we can create a world class technical education system.

This is a once in a generation opportunity to get the system right so that it works for all. Be part of the discussion and have your say now.
